

DYSARTHRIA SUPPORT GROUP

Speech and Hearing Associates announces a support group for persons with Dysarthria.

The Dysarthria support group will bring together people facing similar difficulties. The group will allow members to share experiences and advice, while helping you cope better as you make connections with others facing similar challenges. The group will discuss topics associated with motor speech disorders. Group members can compare therapy goals, treatment plans, and compensatory strategies to get new ideas of what could work best for them.

What are some of the signs and symptoms of Dysarthria?

A person with Dysarthria may experience any of the following symptoms, depending on the extent and location of the damage: slurred speech, speaking softly or barely able to whisper, slow rate of speech, rapid rate of speech with a 'mumbling' quality, limited tongue, lip, and jaw movement, abnormal intonation when speaking, changes in vocal quality, hoarseness and breathiness.

What is Dysarthria?

Dysarthria is a motor speech disorder. Dysarthria causes the muscles of the mouth, face, and respiratory system to become weak, move slowly, or not move at all. Some causes of dysarthria include stroke, head injury, cerebral palsy, and muscular dystrophy. The type and severity of the dysarthria depend on which area of the nervous system is affected.
